

Due Diligence Policy

At Danspin, we wish to act with responsibility in both operation and development of our company.

That's why we are committed to working systematically and dedicated towards making positive contribution to people and societies, everywhere we operate. We will do this by integrating sustainability Due Diligence work.

This commitment is based on internationally recognised principles (OECD Guidelines for multinational enterprises and UN Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights) that are necessary to achieve sustainable development, i.e. human rights, labour rights, environment (including climate and biodiversity), and anti-corruption.

In our sustainability Due Diligence work, we will conduct risk mapping and assessment of where we as a company have the potentially most significant negative impacts on people, environment, society and our supply chains. We will address the potential and actual negative impacts that we cause, contribute to, or are connected to through our business relationships, such as our suppliers.

In our implementation of sustainability Due Diligence, we will involve our suppliers and other relevant organisations/persons.

Working with responsibility is a continuous process. Hence, we will continuously develop our approach and efforts related to sustainability Due Diligence.

This commitment is approved by Danspin's management, is publicly available on our website, and is communicated both internally and externally.
